WHAT IS CSA & HOW DOES IT WORK?

CSA reflects an innovative and resourceful strategy to connect local farmers with local consumers; develop a regional food supply and strong local economy; maintain a sense of community; encourage land stewardship; and honor the knowledge and experience of growers and producers working with small to medium farms. CSA is a unique model of local agriculture whose roots reach back 30 years to Japan where a group of women concerned about the increase in food imports and the corresponding decrease in the farming population initiated a direct growing and purchasing relationship between their group and local farms. This arrangement, called "teikei" in Japanese, translates to "putting the farmers' face on food." This concept traveled to Europe and was adapted to the U.S. and given the name "Community Supported Agriculture" at Indian Line Farm, Massachusetts, in 1985. As of January 2005, there are over 1500 CSA farms across the US and Canada.

SUPPORT SUSTAINABLE FARMS

To cherish what remains of the Earth and to foster its renewal is our only legitimate hope of survival.

- Wendell Berry

MEMBERS WILL:

Enjoy a variety of fresh, organic produce at a great price including many items unavailable at local supermarkets.

Help reduce packaging and distribution wastes that ultimately expend the Earth's resources and end up as pollution.

Support a local family farm. We'll have weekly contact with our farmer letting us know what he'll be bring us for each delivery.

Bring your food source closer to home and help narrow the gap between consumers and farmers.

WHAT FARM WILL BE SUPPORTING?

Lucky Dog Farm in Hamden, NY! Lucky Dog is owned and operated by Richard and Holley Giles. They've been doing CSA's in our area for 11 years. In addition to their CSA program, Lucky Dog Farm sells retail at the Pakatakan farmers market near Margaretville, the Callicoon farmers market, and the Cooperstown farmers market. Their goal is to provide high quality, nutritious, organic produce for our community and to make an honest living for their family.
